Erica Miller, Ph.D.: Speaking Audaciously in the Here and Now

Los Angeles, California. May 1, 2017. Dr. Erica Miller is a walking advertisement for her second book, "Don't Tell Me I Can't Do It!" An octogenarian, Dr. Miller is an author, motivational speaker, therapist, businesswoman, and Holocaust survivor. She uses speaking engagements to get her messages out about living audaciously in the here and now.

"Don't Tell Me I Can't Do It" is a quick trip through Dr. Miller's life, delivered in short, impactful chapters. Guided by five core principles she picked up throughout her life, she uses these ideas to help others experience the positive and live audaciously in the here and now. Her fierce drive to succeed comes through in her emphatic assertion that, "No matter what the hardships are, all of life is a gift."

With her trademark enthusiasm and infectious passion for life, Dr. Miller has inspired audiences across the United States, telling stories filled with perseverance and courage. Her speeches appeal to a wide variety of individuals, young and old, male and female, from diverse cultural backgrounds in settings such as Rotary Clubs, Indiana Informed Trauma Care Symposium, Cross-Discipline Trauma Conference of Central Texas, Fearless Women Global Conference, American Jewish University, and Mensa Society. She instantly engages her audiences and makes sure they leave remembering her valuable messages.

Dr. Miller's passionate enthusiasm for life and her undeniable spark blend to create memorable presentations and lessons that empower others to approach business and life fearlessly.
